SALVAGES OLD NEWSPAPERS

U. S. Laboratory Claims Process Removing the Ink.

Madison, Wis., June 15.—A process to remove ink from old newspapers so the paper can be used again for printing purposes has been developed by the United States Forest Products Laboratory here, according to an announcement to-day. One mill under commercial conditions has deinked 1,500 tons of old newspapers and has remained the paper.

conditions has deinked 1,500 tons of old newspapers and has remade the paper into newsprint stock of desired strength and color, which was accepted by publishers as standard, it is said.

Bentonite, a cleritike substance formed from volcanic ash and found largely in Wyoming is used in the deinking process. It dissolves the lik and leaves the paper perfectly clear, the announcement says.

Because of the cheapness of the new process laboratory officials say they believe that much of the 2,200,000 tons of newsprint annually used can now be
